Things to Do Places to Visit while in Chichen Itza, Yucatan, Mexico Most travel agencies and tour operators sell tourists a "Day-Trip or Group Tour to Chichen Itza" which is a sad way to visit such majestic archaeological zone. Such experience is not your best choice! We Recommend you to avoid such Chichen Itza Tours for you will spend more time traveling in the tour bus than in the site! Besides, such short visits (normally less than three hours visit during mid-day) leave you no room to fully enjoy the Mayan pyramids, stone carvings, murals, and the magic of this impressive site; plus, you will miss so many great Eco-Cultural experiences that bring inner understanding of the Maya world, traditions, culture, and Cosmo-vision. So really we don't recommend such tours. Rather, Yucatan Adventure Travel Writers highly recommend you to book at least a night stay in Chichen Itza, and what better place to stay than Hacienda Chichen Resort, top green boutique hotel and Maya Spa Wellness Center. Actually a two night stay is the least you should reserve as there are many eco-wonderful sites awaiting you to explore, and great pampering experiences to indulge and help you connect with the Mayan profound wisdom and holistic green living awareness found in this soulful hotel. Check their site www.haciendachichen.com or the Monthly Eco-Cultural Free Events sponsored by Hacienda Chichen. November Day of the Dead Tradition: U Janal Pixan A Truly Ancient Mayan Celebration: U Janal Pixan a Mayan Day of the Dead: a Holistic Maya Tradition, Chichen Itza, Mexico. U JANAL PIXAN (U Hannal Pixan) is an intimate Maya family ceremony to remember their deceased and their ancestors. Each 2nd of November Hacienda Chichen and the Mayan J-Men celebrated their annual Day of the Dead before their Full Moon Maya Blessing, both Mayan Ceremonies in Chichen Itza, Yucatan, Mexico. Day of the Dead is a very important ancient tradition. Maya villages prepare with tropical fruits and flowers and with up most care and reverence the "altar" in which the food and beverage for their dead loved ones is to be placed during the first three days of November each year. In some villages nowadays, this ceremony is celebrated as a tradition that blends ancestral Maya practices with the Catholic belief system, imposed on the Maya during the Colonization of their land. Nowadays, most Mayan families' religion is a fusion of Mayan spirituality with the Catholic dogma, such fusion has created the current practices and celebrations found in most mixed family backgrounds in Yucatan. Today, you will find Catholic saint and virgin images placed on the altar as part of the offerings to the soul of those that have left the physical body. The offerings are exotic flowers, personal things, copal and meals the person enjoy while alive: fruits, kakaw, tamales, along with photographs, cruces and other colorful artifacts are carefully placed among candle lights and exotic flowers. Praying and fasting is traditional, as is to decorate with flowers and fruits the tomb site, also spend the night in the cemetery next to the tomb of those loved lighting candles, singing the songs they loved, and offering their favorite meals and memorabilia. Muc bi'pollo, a grant tamale meal, is served traditionally during this days.
